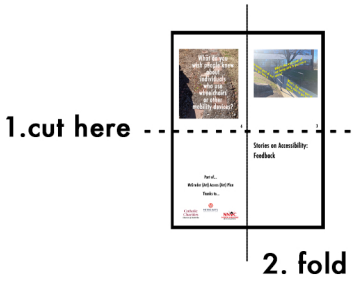
This booklet invites you to reflect on accessibility through a series of questions and images. As you read, consider your own experiences and how access to various spaces shapes the ways we move through and connect with our communities.

To assemble the booklet, (1) print this PDF double-sided, (2) cut and fold the pages as indicated, (3) take the two folded pages and then fit them into one another, and (4) stack the pages according to the page numbers, starting with the cover sheet as page one.



The photographs are from the McGruder Family Resource Center in North Nashville. Originally built as the John Early School, the building has long been a place of community gathering and support. Following a year-long renovation, the center is now fully ADA-accessible, expanding how it can serve residents and visitors alike.
